Hi Doc,

Jessy and I would like to take a minute to thank Patti for squeezing me into your busy schedule last Thursday. We also want to thank you and Jillian for your extensive efforts to thwart my apparent suicide attempt. I gave that tongue a good poke but when that didn't do the trick I tried again a minute later in exactly the same spot. The Coumadin was supposed to finish the job. Granted, death by tongue noshing is not the usual road to ending one's life but who these days wants to be conventional?

FYI - the bleeding stopped completely about a half hour after I got home. You and Jillian did such a good job that I didn't even have to use any of the medicine you sent home with me. Since I hadn't slept at all, I donned my BiPAP Mask to take care of that problem with the hope that the high pressure oxygen might help dry things up. By Friday afternoon I had a large red (but ooze-free) patch on my tongue and by evening the only visible effects were a couple small red spots. Saturday morning you couldn't tell anything happened at all. Now, if I can only keep history from repeating itself! I will try.

Anyway, Jessy and I have a way of keeping scores of Doctors, Dentists, Therapists, etc working overtime in the - so far - successful crusade to make sure we stay alive and somewhat healthy. We try never to take these efforts for granted and so, once again Doc, thank you, Jillian and Patti for all you've done for us in the past and for facing head on the unfortunate likelihood of having to jump in the breach again in the future. Have a great day!

Ps - I thought that over my lengthy career I had experienced nearly every form of dental treatment. I was wrong - now I can scratch Laser Dental Surgery off my Bucket List!
